St. James, Poole

The church is located in the historic quarter of the town, near Poole Quay. It has long been associated with the local fishing trade and is known locally as 'the fishermen's church'. The church has an unusual weather vane fashioned in the shape of a fish.

The tower has a peal of ten bells, eight of which are of historical importance having been cast by William Dobson of Downham Market, Norfolk and have been hung in the tower since 1821. The other two smaller bells, cast by Mears & Stainbeck of London were added in 1937 to commemorate the coronation of King George VI. All the bells have been fully refurbished and were rededicated on the 16th of November 2008. The Dobson bells are protected by the Council of Care for Churches. There are now only approximately two hundred Dobson bells remaining in existence and only eighty three of those are in the UK

Sacred Heart, Bournemouth

In 1870 the Jesuits from the private chapel of Lord Edward Fitzalan Howard transferred to a small chapel on Richmond Hill and so began the Sacred Heart Church in Bournemouth. In 1969 The Jesuit community handed over the pastoral care of the Sacred Heart Parish to the secular priests of the Diocese of Portsmouth. The 1970s and 1980s saw considerable work of restoration to both the church and the pres-by-tery. During this time the interior of the church was re-ordered in line with the liturgical decrees of the Second Vatican Council.

It was during this time too, and to mark the historic visit to England and Wales by His Holiness, Pope John Paul II, that the belfry was restored and a ring of six bells was installed. On the evening of Monday 28 November 1983 the bells rang out for the first time. The Sacred Heart Church is one of only a few Catholic Churches in this country to

St. Peter, Bournemouth

The Grade II listed Parish Church is a well-known landmark which can be clearly seen as you approach the town. There has been a church on the site at least as far back as the eleventh century. Little is known of the wooden building recorded in the Domesday Book. It was rebuilt in the 13th century and survived until 1853, when it was completely knocked down and rebuilt. The present building was constructed between 1853 and 1855 and includes many memorials and features from the thirteenth-century church.

St. George, Oakdale

Created by architects Robert Potter and Richard Hare it proved a radical design back in 1960 when the church was built. The unique and striking interior of the roof at St George's symbolises palm trees spreading out across the main body of the church on cantilevered timber trusses.

The gabled west tower (or campanile) - described by Taylor as "rather self-conscious" - contains a light ring of six bells which were installed in 1989

Lady St. Mary, Wareham

Lady St Mary Church is an ancient Minster Church with Saxon origins associated with a Priory, until abolished by Henry VIII. It was substantially modified in Victorian times. The church is notable as the possible burial place of King Beorhtric, A notable feature is the unique hexagonal lead font dating to around 1200. A new tenor bell was cast at John Taylor Bell-founders of Loughborough in 2014 to replace the old poor-toned tenor.

St Edward the Martyr, Corfe Castle

The Church was probably built during the 12th century. During the Civil War (1642-1646), Parliamentary troops stationed themselves inside the church using the church as stabling for their horses and men. Much damage was caused and shot marks can still be seen both inside and outside the church. In 1859-60, the church underwent a major restoration mainly because the walls were bulging out by one foot; so all the walls were pulled down, apart from the tower, and rebuilt. The tower was built between the late 14th or early 15th century. Up to 1774, there were only 5 bells in the belfry but there are now 6 with the earliest dating from 1795. The original No 5 Bell cast in 1739, was replaced in 1999 when restoration work was undertaken in the belfry to get the bells ringing again, having been silent since the 1950's. This bell is now situated in the north aisle.

St. James, Kingston

St. James, Kingston, is a magnificent example of Victorian quasi Gothic Architecture. The interior is fabricated with two of Purbeck's stones - the creamy white Portland bed and the grey to green / blue Purbeck 'Marble'. The marble is extensively used for the pillars which support the arches and the colonettes which guard the windows

Originally there was a ring of eight bells; the treble and tenor bells were re-cast and hung in 1921. In the year 2000 two more bells were added and these new trebles were cast by Taylors.

St Nicholas of Myra , Worth Matravers

The church in Worth Matravers was first built in about 1100 and over the next few hundred years it was changed and added to before being completely restored in 1869. The church is of Saxon origin and one of the oldest in Dorset. Inside there is a beautiful chancel arch, decorated with 2 rows of sharply incised dog-tooth carvings. In the churchyard is the grave of Benjamin Jesty, a Dorset yeoman reputed to be the first person to inoculate anyone with cowpox to ward off smallpox.

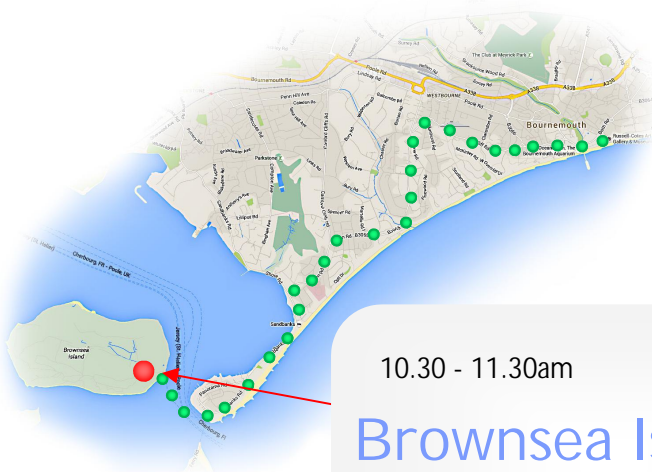

St Mary the Virgin, Swanage

St Mary's is the historic Parish Church of Swanage; the present building, dating from 1860 and 1901 replaces the medieval building, of which the fourteenth century tower is all that remains. Among the windows, the east window and the Creation window are fine examples from the mid and late twentieth century.

St. Mary's has a peal of 8 bells, the earliest of which dates from 1594. Until 1888 St Mary's had only four bells when three trebles and a tenor were added. In August the following year, the first and second peals on the bells were both rung on the same day; these were the first peals of Stedman Triples and Bob Major ever to be rung in Dorset. Both of these peals were conducted by James W Washbrook; perhaps the most famous and accomplished ringer of his generation. The bells were last restored in 1940.

St Mary, Brownsea Island

St Mary's, built in 1853, is a Victorian church that's stuck in the past with no electricity or water supply. The church remains very much as it was then - its organ is pumped by hand and the only lighting comes from candles.

The church's construction was part of ambitious plans by the island's then owner, Colonel Waugh. Later, in 1927, Mrs Bonham-Christie was the island's owner and decided to live there, alone, as a recluse. She gave everyone on the island a year's notice to leave, an act which reduced the island's community from 70 to around six people. The island became overgrown and left to nature, as was the church. Mrs Bonham-Christie destroyed the island's community but in doing so also preserved the island.

In 1962 after Mrs Bonham-Christie's death, the island was handed over to the state in lieu of her death duties, before later passing into the care of the National Trust - and the church services were resumed. Today, from May to September, it remains a working church. The church's building belongs to the Church of England, and is the only part of the island to not be owned by the National Trust.

Sunday Ringing

Getting to Brownsea Island

Foot Ferry From Sandbanks: (Sat Nav users use postcode BH13 7QP)

From Marsham Court Hotel, turn left onto the Ring Road and follow signs to West Cliff. At Durley Roundabout take 1st exit (brown sign to Alum Chine). Then follow signposts to Canford Cliffs and Sandbanks, and signs to Swanage via Toll Ferry.

Once on the Sandbanks peninsular the road goes to two lanes - do NOT take the left land marked Ferry as this refers to the Toll Ferry not the Brownsea Ferry and you could end up in a long queue! Turn second right into Brownsea Road and park in the streets (free parking).

Walk to the Yellow Kiosk of the Brownsea Ferry Company (by the Chain Ferry).

The Ferry runs every half hour, on the hour and half past the hour.

You will need to get the first Ferry at 10.00 am. The ferry from Sandbanks costs £6.50.

Entry to Island:

Adult £6.30, Free to National Trust members.

The return Ferry runs every half hour at 15 and 45 minutes past the hour.
